A TIMELY ADVICE....

“Working as a trainee at the KK Hospital at Hampshire Road in the late 1960’s was a hectic time, to say the least. The hospital was breaking the world record of having the largest number of deliveries year after year; not to mention the enormous gynaecology workload. I remember we had to literally dash to and fro the three places — outpatient, the labour wards and the operating theatres. After some weeks, we were all exhausted and frustrated at the kind of results despite our untiring effort.

Then came a timely pearl of advice from the late Dr Goon Sek Mun, enshrined in these simple words:- ‘No good can ever come out of rushing’. Thereafter, I learned to spend time listening to the patients and examining them carefully, no matter how harassed I was. It meant making the right diagnosis earlier, administering the correct and efficient treatment and avoiding complication; thus saving more time. The work at the hospital remained hectic and busy, but I began to find it rewarding and gratifying. Till this day I adhere to this golden rule.”
